

Adebunmi Adeola Akinbo's Profile

Adebunmi Akinbo is a dedicated professional in the African tech and media industry with a proven track record of leadership and a strong focus on community empowerment. He is the founder of DNS Africa Media and Communications, a sub-franchise of DNS World Media and Communications, where he leads impactful initiatives designed to connect and empower grassroots communities across Africa.

His commitment to building a better future is evident through his involvement with several prominent organizations. He is the founder of Community NetHUBs Africa and Culture Games Africa and currently serves on the Board of Trustees of the African ICT Foundation (AfICTF). A pioneer board member and former Director of the Nigeria Internet Registration Association (NiRA), he also served as the organization's Acting Chief Operations Officer.

A passionate advocate for local content and community development, he holds key leadership roles as Secretary to the Governing Board of the Association for Information and Communication Technology Local Content (ICTLOCA) and Vice President of the Internet Society (ISOC) Nigeria Chapter.

He is also the Managing Director of KOBOKINGS Limited, an innovation-driven organization dedicated to advancing the U.N. Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and tackling poverty through technology. His work has garnered several accolades, including the prestigious Paul Muchane Fellows Award at ICANN78 in 2023.

His career is a testament to his unwavering commitment to leveraging technology for social impact, digital inclusion, and community advancement throughout Africa.

Outside his professional pursuits, he is a multifaceted individual with a love for sports and poetry.